Leipzig/Halle Airport is a transshipment point for goods from all around the world and also acts as the region's gateway to international economic and tourist hubs. The site therefore makes a huge contribution to the sustainable development of central Germany. At the same time, the airport is careful not to lose sight of its responsibility with regard to the local community.

Great importance is therefore placed on noise and environmental protection, as well as on holding discussions with the airport's neighbours. It therefore was and still is our defined goal to reach consensus between ecological and economic interests both at stages of planning and during the implementation of expansion and new construction measures.

At the same time, the airport takes a number of active roles in the community and supports various initiatives and activities, for example charitable projects, schools and day care centres as well as sports clubs.
